

G R O W T H M I N D S E T

In past seasons, class schedules and groupings were determined primarily by grade level.

While this helped with organizing classes by age, it didn't always ensure that dancers were placed where they could grow most effectively.

Last year, we shifted to ability-based leveling to better serve all of our dancers.

Here's why:

More Personalized Growth:

- Students develop skills at different rates.
- Ability-based leveling allows us to place dancers where they'll be challenged appropriately—without being overwhelmed or held back.

More Effective Instruction:

- Teaching becomes more focused and efficient when students in a class share similar technical foundations and readiness for specific skills.

Stronger Class Cohesion:

- Classes based on ability foster better teamwork, confidence, and camaraderie, as students are working toward similar goals at a similar pace.

Improved Performance Outcomes:

- When dancers are in the right level, their confidence and technical ability tend to grow faster—leading to stronger performances and a more fulfilling season.

Better Preparation for Productions:

- Especially for advanced tracks, ability-based groups allow us to tailor choreography and training that matches the group's readiness.
